Man had 31, indecent images

MORE than 31,000 indecent photographs of children were found on a laptop computer hidden beneath a Haverhill man's pillow, a court heard.

Paul Wynn – who eight years ago was jailed for a similar offence was sentenced to two years in prison yesterday.

Prosecutor Michael Edwards said that subsequent examination of the laptop, found by police who called at his home, and associated equipment revealed the presence of 31,617 indecent images of young children and 285 movies containing the same type of images.

Ipswich Crown Court heard that following the seizure of the computer at Wynn's home in Howe Road, Haverhill, on February 2, he had been interviewed and made full admissions about what he had been doing.

Wynn, who in June 2003 was sentenced to 15 months in prison after pleading guilty to 16 offences of making indecent images of children, told officers that he was only interested in girls aged between four and 10. Defending, Richard Kelly said that on the expiry of his previous sentence, Wynn, 32, had bought a computer and tried to avoid viewing illegal indecent material but had soon found himself caught up in offending again.

compulsion for which he needed help, said Mr Kelly, and he had made no attempt to minimise what he had done. Mr Kelly said: "Even before his arrest he had identified the fact that he needed help but he feared prosecution if he revealed to anyone what he was up to."

Wynn had virtually no social life and no friends and was "effectively a hermit", a report produced by the Probation Service said.

Sentencing him, Judge David Goodin told Wynn that young children suffered "hideous indignities" to provide the sort of material downloaded onto his computer.

Judge Goodin said: "You remain a danger to children around the world who are taken from wherever they are taken, subjected to this indignity and photographed for the perverted pleasure of people like you."

Wynn was jailed for two years and told he must sign on the Sexual Offences Register for 10 years. He was also made the subject of a Sexual Offences Prevention Order, banning him indefinitely from owning or using a computer capable of connection to the internet without notifying the police or probation service.

Wynn is also prohibited from being with any child aged under 16 without a parent or guardian being present.

A weighty discussion

A TRADITIONAL outdoor Methodist service was a real heavy-hitter at the Haverhill Show this year as preaching and weightlifting went hand in hand.

Each year Haverhill Methodist Church, based in Camps Road, holds a short service from the Recreation Ground's bandstand during Sunday's show.

But this year they stepped things up by employing guest speakers from a charity called Tough Talk.

The group, made up of men with difficult and often violent backgrounds, aim to share their beliefs by not only telling personal stories but by attracting attention through physical activity.

Tough Talk's Simon Pichbeck and lan McDowell chatted to visitors, while lan did a power-lift of 160kg and invited members of the public to try their hands at bench-presses.

Kathy Cohen, Haverhill Methodist Church communications team leader, said: "The Tough Talk presentation was well received, with quite a few passers-by stopping to see what was going on and staying to watch. Several people stayed to speak with lan and Simon after the service."

Dancers wow show crowds

Students at the Lisa Mason School of Dance wowed the crowds on Sunday at the Recreation Ground in Camps Road with seven routines in modern, tap and ballet.

Lisa said afterwards: "The girls danced beautifully and had a fantastic time performing and wandering around the show. "Well done to everyone who took part in the performance – they did us all proud.

"I received some really nice positive comments from passers-by as to how well the girls performed."

The school offers classes for all ages.

The school offers classes for all ages, from under-3s to adults. Sessions take place at Castle Manor Business and Enterprise College in Eastern Avenue, Haverhill, and at the Salvation Army Hall in Chauntry Road.

Are we all ready to go glamping?

AN increasingly popular camping phenomenon may soon be arriving in the area, offering holidaymakers a more luxurious taste of the great outdoors.

If a planning application succeeds, Hundon Grange will operate six large woodframed yurts in its grounds, allowing users a taste of "glamping" – glamorous camping.

Also known as boutique

Also known as boutique camping, posh camping or comfy camping, the tipi-like structures enable visitors to escape the hassles of finding camp space and setting up their own tent, while still sleeping in the open.

The owners of the grade II listed house and gardens, on the road linking Hundon to Kedington and Clare, have applied to St Edmundsbury Borough Council's planning committee to change the use of a patch of agricultural land in the three-and-a-half acre site into the unusual campsite to be open from April 1 to October 31 annually.

The application states a desire to provide "a small number of discreetly-placed yurts in the grounds, placed well away from the road and public view."

The temporary beige structures are to be in a traditional Mongolian design and made of oak and canvas. They would be dismantled

An existing toilet area near the main house would be converted into a larger toilet and shower block, and a sink would be installed for washing and cleaning.

The larger yurts at 18ft across would be able to house four people and smaller ones two. Each would be provided with a woodburning stove allowing heating and simple cooking facilities.

The applicants also expect they will take on three further part-time members of staff to help with the project.

According to the application, no further roads or paths would be built.

It read: "It is intended that users will park in the normal car park and walk across the grassy area to their designated yurt."

The application will go before St Edmundsbury District Council later this Concern over road plan

TOWN councillors have said a plan by Suffolk County Council to convert a "death trap" road to one-way traffic flow are unsatisfactory. Suffolk County Council is in consultation over plans to make the changes at Crowland Road from the bottom of Castle Lane to Withersfield Road. But while members of Haverhill Town Council have agreed the road system needs to be addressed, they argued this was not the right way to do it. The fear was raised at a recent meeting that there was a danger of relocating the traffic to other dangerous points in the town. such as Swan Lane, Camps Road and Eastern Avenue. There were also concerns about the length of the one-way section. Councillors agreed and have put the idea to the county council for consideration.

It's time for Jesstonbury!

AN open invitation has been issued to join in an afternoon of celebration in memory of teenager Jessica Gower in aid of two life-changing charities.

Linton Village College will host Jesstonbury – featuring live music from friends of Jess – next weekend.

It has been organised by Jessica's classmates and teachers of in an effort to bring a festival atmosphere to Haverhill.

Jess, a former student at the school, was diagnosed with primary bone cancer in the summer of 2009, and despite an operation to remove the tumour and extensive chemotherapy she died in December aged just 14.

And since their tragic loss, family and friends have worked tirelessly to raise money for charities that did their best for Jess and could help others in the future.

will take place on Saturday, July 16, from noon to 3pm, and entry is free and open to everyone.

The event will include live music from local talent, food stalls, belly dancing, crafts, a beat-the-goalie competition, bouncy castle and raffle.

Jessica's parents Shirley and Mic, of Arrendene Road, Haverhill, said: "Jessica's friends are inspired by the way she lived

"She was a happy person who was friendly to everyone and who took a positive approach to all that she did, including her fight against cancer.

"They hope that the afternoon will reflect her love of life but also hope to raise awareness of childhood cancer and the impact it has on children and their families."

The theme of the afternoon will be lemons, because of a humorous comment Jessica once made on her Facebook page – "When life gives you lemons, keep them, because, hey, free lemons" – something her class 10HP friends have taken to heart.

The afternoon will end with a balloon release in memory of Jess.

All proceeds from Jesstonbury will go to CLIC Sargent and the Bone Cancer Research Trust.

Every day, 10 young people hear they have cancer. CLIC Sargent is the only UK charity that offers all-round care and support.

Meanwhile, the Bone Cancer Research Trust aims to improve outcomes for people with primary bone cancer through research, awareness and support.

In May, Team Jess – made up of her parents, younger sister Isabelle and seven other family members and friends – completed a 96-mile walk along the West Highland Way in her memory. They have raised £14,000.

Concern over street lights switch-off

HOUSING estates could be set to lose their light under Suffolk County Council plans to save up to £550,000 a year.

Street lights across Haverhill may be turned off from midnight to 5.30pm as part of a new "intelligent lighting system" to be installed by council chiefs at a cost of £2.5 million.

The lights will be turned off remotely from a central hub, with the authority currently in discussions with safer neighbourhood teams, town councils and residents' associations across the county to decide how the system will work best in each neighbourhood, before it is brought in as soon as October.

However, there has already been a backlash in Haverhill to the idea with town councillors fearing it will encourage crime.

Cllr Phillip French, who represents South Ward which includes the Clements Estate, said: "We are worried that this might lead to an increase in vandalism."

Haverhill mayor Maureen Byrne added: "I have real concerns about lights going off, particularly in the Clements estate where there are underpasses, steps and pockets of anti-social behaviour.

"We are all for saving money, but not if it puts people at risk."

Meanwhile, Gwen Dalton, chairwoman of the Chalkstone Area Tenants and Residents Association, said: "We haven't been consulted yet and I think it is going to be dangerous.

"I am concerned for the safety of people."

A county council spokeswoman said: "We are sensitive to local need which is why this system allows street lighting to be left on for longer periods – even remaining on all night – where it is necessary for safety.

"The system Suffolk County Council is implementing is fully adjustable and can be modified if required."

She added that areas where the system has been implemented have not seen an increase in crime.

Teenagers admit attack in street

TWO teenagers became involved in an early-morning disturbance in Haverhill, a court has heard.

The incident was sparked by comments which were apparently directed at a woman walking home from The Bell public house at 2am on September 19 last year.

Ipswich Crown Court was told on Wednesday how Kirsty Edgecombe was punched in the face when she confronted Siobhan Van Brown, who she thought was responsible. Prosecutor Micaila Williams said Miss Edgecome's boyfriend, Harry Crane, intervened but ended up on the ground where he was kneed several times in the side by Thomas Wood.

side by Thomas Wood.
Van Brown, 18, of Ickleton
Place, Haverhill, and Wood, also 18, of Jay Close, Haverhill, pleaded guilty to assault.

Miss Williams said it was now agreed that the comments which led to the incident may not have been directed at Miss Edgecombe.

Appearing for Van Brown, Joanne Eley said she had been drinking on that night and accepted that what she did had gone beyond self defence.

Christopher Paxton, appearing for Wood, said the incident had been the result of a "misunderstanding and then a quick domino effect took place".

Van Brown was fined £50 and Wood £90. Both were ordered to pay £80 victim compensation and £40 prosecution costs.

Variety makes show a big hit

TTRACTIONS for all ages and interests brought out the community for a town show.

Returning to the Recreation Ground in Camps Road on Sunday, the annual Haverhill Show was the main attraction for thousands of people from the town and surrounding villages.

Visitors were spoilt for choice when it came to entertainment with the arena area hosting a dog show, baby show, dance acts from around the region, karate demonstrations and a classic car show.

There was also a boot sale with hundreds of cars at the event, as well as hovercrafts, bouncy castles, a range of stalls, and a beer tent.

Benjamin Driver, who promoted the event on behalf on the Show Society, said: "It went really well and we are all pretty tired now it is finished.

"We had a good few thousand people come through and everyone seemed to be having a great time, enjoying the attractions.

"It was really a unique year as the main arena had such a wide variety of acts which drew crowds."

Mr Driver added his thanks to Cllr Maureen Byrne, Haverhill mayor, for attending and to the Haverhill Air Training Corps who helped to steward the event.

I won't give up my civil rights for a night on town

Sir, I write in reaction to your article entitled 'Fingerprint Bid to Curb Trouble' (Weekly News, June 30). Firstly, I would like to think that this article dealt with the contentious issue of 'civil liberties' as opposed to just being another advertorial to appease local business.

Taken for an instant that I may believe that the article's intention was dealing with the advent and use of new technology in the prevention of crime, I really do not believe that enough effort and time has been given to the other side of the controversy - those of us, those 0.01 per cent (according to the statistics quoted by Mr Zachariou) who would like an evening out without having to sacrifice our liberties in what I think is still a free country.

This Orwellian idea that a private citizen can own very detailed and private information about his clientele should be more problematic for a lot more people if they only understood that Mr Zachariou now owns that information and can use it to sell on or to incriminate anyone, who. I think, still deserve to have the recourse of the law courts.

Surely underage drinking and a few bar brawls can be managed without the use of paramilitary and face recognition technology. This is a very sad reflection on our society, and decline of our values.

Yes I prefer not to just give anyone a copy of my ID and fingerprints if that's OK with you Harry, so I won't be negating my rights just for a night out on the town. We have more than enough surveillance and intrusiveness in our lives, thank you.

HIDDEN HISTORY: The walks led by Haverhill and District Local History Group are always a popular part of the Haverhill Festival, and this vear was no exception.

We traced the history of the town through some of its lesser-known byways and buildings on a sunlit July evening. And Haverhill did hold secrets even for those who thought they knew the town well: a private house built round the remains of an ancient windmill; a medieval house hidden behind the modern exterior of an estate agent's office; the cemetery's double-sided chapel which allowed Nonconformists and Anglicans to be separated even in death – all this and much

Council chief quits – with a year's salary

BY JENNIE BAKER

Fmail: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

ANDREA Hill - the £218,000-a-year chief executive of Suffolk County Council - stood down this week after allegations over staff welfare and expenses claims.

Mrs Hill, who had been on extended leave since Easter following a complaint from a whistle-blower over the death of a senior official, will receive a year's pay.

An independent inquiry was launched after 51-year-old David White, the head of legal services, was found hanged in Butley Woods, near Wood-bridge, on April 4.

Police said they were not treating his death as suspicious but law firm Wragge and Co was called in after senior officials received an anonymous letter following the tragedy.

The allegations were believed to include claims about 47-year-old Mrs Hill's "domineering management style".

The married mother of three, who was assistant chief executive of Cambridge City Council during the 1990s, ignored calls from Communities Secretary Eric Pickles for

The committee received a report into Mrs Hill's expense claims during her tenure as chief executive and concluded that there was no dishonesty in the claims made – although there were claims which, in the current climate, might not represent best use of public

The news was welcomed by Lib Dem opposition leader Kathy Pollard, who said: "The council's controversial new strategic direction policy and the constant criticism of Andrea Hill have become so interlinked that it has distracted from the work the council is trying to do.

"The Government is saying no council chief executive should be paid more than the Prime Minister and, given the current economic crisis and the cuts being made across the council, I hope the new chief executive will be offered a more sensible salary."

Move to take on centre

A BID has been made by an unnamed group take over community centre.

St Edmundsbury Borough Council had been looking to offload Chalkstone Community Centre in Haverhill in order to save £90,000 in running costs and repairs.

But the council has admitted being in discussions with a comm-unity group in the town which has approached them with a view to taking over the building in Strasbourg

Gwen Dalton, chair of the Chalkstone Area and Residents Association said it was not behind the bid.

She said: "A this stage we are not sure what the group wants to do with the centre, but we want the community to know discussions are taking place to find a solution."

A feast of fun on the streets

SHOPPERS were greeted by weird and wonderful street acts as they went about their business in Haverhill at the weekend.

High Street, Queen Street and Market Square were awash with strange sights and sounds as the Haverhill Street Festival entertained crowds on Saturday.

Highlight acts included comical traffic wardens who slapped parking tickets on any thing or person remaining still for any period of time, a juggling and unicycle performance, a group of cavemen who used a car in the spirit of television's The Flintstones and a comedy musician who entertained with his violin and a little help from the audience.

There was also an appearance by some refined Restoration ladies – on stilts.

Haverhill Town Council organised the annual event as part of the town's twoweek arts and music festival, which finished on Sunday. Nick Keeble, arts and leisure chief at Nick Keeble, arts and leisure chief at the council, said: "There were a fair few odd sights to see.

"At all times in the day there were at least two things going on through the town centre. It was good fun and crowds were surrounding the acts.

"We had shoppers getting involved and people who came down specially to see what was going on."

Fund for Aiden reaches £5,000

BY ADAM LUKE

Email: editorial@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

MORE than £5,000 has been raised for a toddler who needs expensive surgery to give him a better standard of life.

Aiden Thompson, aged 18 months, was diagnosed with a severe case of cerebral palsy called Bilateral Spastic Hemiplegia in

Since then his parents, Victoria and Gareth, have asked their ommunity to help.

The family need to raise £40,000 to travel to America for an operation to deal with the disability, which creates stiffness of the limbs and restricts movement.

And Victoria, of Sperling Drive, Haverhill, asked the Weekly News – backers of the campaign - to deliver an update on Aiden and his identical twin Owen's health.

She said: "Aiden has been getting on very well with his physio and they are very impressed with his movement.

"You can tell he is getting more and more frustrated though, now that Owen is up and about and moving all over the place while Aiden is more still."

The 32-year-old gave birth to Aiden and Owen on New Year's Day last year when they were the first babies born in Cambridge in a new decade and the first births in Addenbrooke's Rosie facility.

The operation required is rarely funded by the NHS in England and when occasionally carried out in Bristol, is only done from the age of 4 - at which point the condition can have grown more serious.

If the money is raised, Aiden will be added to a waiting list at St Louis Children's Hospital in the US, where his family hope he will

Apprentice fought through pregnancy difficulties

A MOTHER who completed an apprenticeship despite an ongoing complicated pregnancy has been given an award for her commitment.

Jacqueline Duffy from Haverhill picked up the Governors' Prize for achievement through determination in difficult circumstances at West Suffolk College's prizegiving in St Edmundsbury Cathedral, Bury St Edmunds.

Shortly after starting her placement at CXG Property Services in Haverhill's High Street, Jacqueline found out that she was expecting - but over the coming months became unwell and needed to spend time in hospital.

She underwent keyhole surgery 17 weeks into the pregnancy.

A spokeswoman for West Suffolk College said: "Despite all this, her determination and motivation never flagged.

"Although she had periods of time off work. Jacqueline worked hard and ensured that she completed her apprenticeship

"In her short time at CXG, she was able to make a real difference, because she was not afraid to make suggestions to senior managers. She demonstrated professionalism and a 'can-do' attitude at all times

Commitment rewarded: Richard Carter, chairman of the Governors of West Suffolk College, presents the prize to Jacqueline Duffy.

The Haverhill woman, who now has a baby boy called Flynn, said she is keen to return to work at some stage.

The prizegiving, supported by Pearson – the world's leading learning company – awarded 51 prizes to students from across the region who have excelled. Haverhill's Lauren Ross won business and tourism student of the year, while Judy Paul from the town collected the Haverhill Learning Centre Prize.

Bid to move pre-school to primary site

PLANS have been lodged for a new pre-school in Haverhill.

Suffolk County Council has applied for planning permission which would allow Little Wonders to follow Westfield Primary School in its move from Manor Road to Chalkstone

The proposal, before St Edmundsbury Borough Council, would see the pre-school relocated to the same site near Samuel Ward Academy in order to provide children with a gentle progression from pre-school to primary school.

Simon White, who made the application on behalf of the county council children and young people's services, said that the proposals would create a 30-place centre in a single-storey building to the south west of the existing school site.

The design and access statement read: "It is paramount for the new pre-school to be located within the primary school site to allow for the children's gentle progression from pre-school to primary school."

BY ADAM LUKE

The total area of the development would be 585sq m, while the gross internal area would be 118sq m, with open spaces allowing a 'multi-purpose teaching space"

The land to be used was previously arable but has since been cleared for the construction of the primary school building, with which the pre-school would share a driveway and car park.

Mr White added in the application: "The pre-school team have been regularly consulted on designs and have formerly approved the final proposal."

Due to the change in Suffolk's education system from three-tiered to two-tiered schools, Westfield Primary has been built for 420 pupils before they move onto Samuel Ward secondary.

The application is due to go before St Edmundsbury Borough Council's planning committee later this month.

Take stress out of childcare

CHOOSING the right nursery for your child can be a challenge – you want somewhere that is homely and safe and, above all, treats your child as an individual.

Happily there are two nurseries which tick all of these boxes in the local area, thanks to Home From Home Childcare.

The nurseries, based in central Haverhill and Withersfield, have small group sizes, fresh home-cooked food made on site, and plenty of activities for babies and children to enjoy.

The Haverhill nursery is conveniently central, but still has separate garden space for the different age groups. This nursery operates on sessional rates, although hourly rates are available if required.

Both preschools admit children from aged 2 to 4, and are funded for 3-yearolds. Both nurseries have dedicated baby rooms.

Home from Home follows the Early Years Foundation stage principles. The Withersfield nursery is a rural idyll based in a large Victorian farmhouse complete with two acres of land, as well as its own resident guinea pigs and rabbits.

To help parents with busy schedules, childcare is available on an hourly basis, providing flexibility.

Both nurseries are open all year and Withersfield runs a Holiday Club during halfterms and school holidays.

Activities at both sites involve sensory play and treasure baskets for the babies, and cookery, music and movement, nature walks and picnics for older children. For nervous children (or parents!) trial sessions are available on request.

Needless to say, all staff are enhanced-CRB checked, and the nurseries follow all necessary legislation, as well as being Ofsted registered.

Look out kids! Here comes upernanny

A FEW short years ago, a new superhero landed in our midst, only this one wore a sombre suit instead of spandex and boasted the power to deal with precocious

Her name was Supernanny and her no-nonsense approach to parenting was an instant success.

Seven years on and Supernanny, or Jo Frost as she prefers to be called these days, is a multi-millionaire and a household name on both sides of the Atlantic. Even Oprah Winfrey gave Frost her seal of approval by inviting her on her show numerous times.

It was 2004 when the former babysitter-turnedChannel 4's new series Supernanny, which spawned books and spin-offs across

For the past few years, Frost, who turned 40 this week, has spent the majority of her time travelling across the States to film the US version of Supernanny.

The schedule, which involved being on the road 11 months at a time, finally proved too much and, perhaps prompted by her milestone birthday, Frost recently reassessed her life.

"I made a very conscious decision last year to finish Supernanny in the US," she says. "I'd spent six years living on the road and I didn't have a home, so I decided to call it a day after the seventh season."

And now, Frost's back on home turf with a second series of Jo Frost: Extreme Parental Guidance, which this time takes the form of a roadshow.

'The new series is a little bit different because you're going to see me travelling up and down Great Britain, in my own little studio home reaching out to hundreds of families," says Frost.

During the series, Frost tackles her widest range of family issues yet, from the modern teenage obsessions to the age-old battles with eaters and poor sleepers.

"It's really important for parents to be able to look at situations and feel in control," explains Frost.

And despite all her experience, Supernanny continues to be surprised.

"I remember during the roadshow, one lady saying she had a problem because her kid wanted to be paid to go to school.

"You'll see me very clearly handle that situation," she says in a jokingly clipped voice. Frost doesn't have children of her own and thankfully doesn't mind being asked if she might one day.

"If you're helping families, people are going to be asking about children, aren't they? I've created a balance in my life so (having a family) will most definitely happen.'

And you can bet when she does, they'll be the world's most well behaved children. ■ Io Frost: Extreme

SAMUEL Ward was rated by Ofsted as an 'outstanding school', and is in the top 5 per cent nationally for GCSE outcomes, as well as being one of the highest performing secondary schools in Suffolk.

Sixth-form provision is also excellent, with high numbers of students accessing university and a regular number of students winning places at top universities like Oxford and Cambridge.

One of the reasons for its success is its "outstanding ethos and culture", developed through a "human scale" approach to learning that puts pupils' learning first.

Years 7 and 8 have their own purpose-built accommodation, are in small tutor groups of 14, have separate dining and social areas and a unique programme of learning. By teaching Year 7 and 8 pupils in small groups with an emphasis on literacy, numeracy and a modern foreign language, most pupils are ready to begin their GCSE course early in Year 9, providing pupils with greater opportunities for higher academic outcomes.

Pupils remain in small tutor groups of 14 throughout their time at Samuel Ward, beginning each day with meeting time, a programme designed to build confidence and self-esteem.

At the end of each day, three days per week, pupils are involved in a huge range of enrichment activities, enhanced through a partnership with the Community Sports Association and Abbey Croft Leisure. These activities foster not only competition and teamwork, but also resilience and leadership.

Teaching at Samuel Ward is outstanding, and it has earned a national reputation for innovative approaches to excellent learning.

The school has Leading Edge and Training School status and a higher proportion of advanced skills teachers than any other school in Suffolk, along with three nationally trained assessors.

Opportunities to learn never end. The school runs weekend classes, a highly regarded summer school for gifted and talented pupils and the learning platform, FROG, provides lessons and support 24 hours a day. Students connect with the wider world through annual exchange trips with Germany and France and there are strong links with schools in India and China.

Students are encouraged to take on leadership roles. The Student Leadership Award is available to all students and is externally accredited. Large numbers of students take part in the Duke of Edinburgh Award, the Community Sports Leader Award and the Arts Award along with a large number in competitive sports

Many sixth-form students become paid instructors, helping younger pupils with their learning and many others play a leading role in the leadership of the three Houses – Brunel, Darwin and Cavell – that encourage inter-house competition.

When students leave Samuel Ward they look forward to the future with confidence, a confidence built on firm values; high outcomes and a confidence that comes from preparing for the future now.

'I couldn't do PE at school — but now I'm going for gold' wo years after being told she couldn't study for a GCSE in PE, Georgina Bullen has been selected to represent Great Britain at the 2012 Paralympics.

When Georgina was six, a routine eye test revealed some shattering news. "We went to an appointment just to check for glasses and they actually panicked and thought I might have a brain tumour," remembers Georgina.

"We went to the hospital and at this point I had no idea what was going on. I think I found the possibility of having a bed with teddies in the hospital exciting!"

Tests showed that Georgina didn't have a brain tumour, but was suffering from an extremely rare eye condition caused by optic nerve head drusen (commonly known in older people as macular degeneration), which normally only affects people in old age. At the time, there were only 15 other known cases for Georgina's age range.

"It's similar to old-age blindness," explains Georgina's mum, Jackie. "It creates calcium deposits on the optic nerve. She had no eye sight problems – well, we hadn't detected any – the only thing was she was slow learning to read and we understand now it was because these things were floating around in her eye and causing distortion, so the letter D would look like a C or an L. It's actually called optic nerve head drusen with choroidal neovascularisation, which is a bit of a mouthful, so we generally call it macular degeneration."

Despite being told it was highly unlikely the condition would spread to Georgina's other eye, when she was seven-and-a-half, Jackie noticed Georgina was struggling to focus and, sadly, discovered the condition had spread to both eyes.

"When the second eye went it was shattering for us," admits Jackie. "I was in the kitchen with Georgie and she was sitting across the table from me and I realised she couldn't see me any more."

Georgina's parents and her three brothers were tested to see if it was a genetic condition, but there was no link.

"There's no reason to it," has miles Georgina, sitting on the sofa with her conditions to the sofa with her conditions as the sofa with her conditions are conditions as the sofa with her conditions are conditions as the sofa with her conditions are conditions.

smiles Georgina, sitting on the sofa with her mum in her Shepreth home. "My field of vision is about 12 degrees as opposed to 180. People presume I've got tunnel vision when it's actually more like black patches – so it's more like my eyes see through cracks and make up what's hidden behind it. So if I look at a person's eyes I can see one eye but not the other, but I might see something else in a different area."

different area."
Georgina – whose condition prevented her from taking a GCSE in PE – explains that what most people can see from 60 metres away, she needs to be 10 times closer to see – just six metres away
– in order for it to come into her vision.

To Georgina, a sheet of paper with faint text appears the same as a blank sheet; in the evening when light is dim, she struggles to see anything at all, and bright light can also have a negative affect, as her piercing blue eyes are sensitive to intense light.

Although her vision has deteriorated further since she developed the condition as a young child, Georgina is not sure by how much. "I guess it's hard for me to know because I can't really imagine seeing much else. I think my parents notice more of a difference when they take me to places and I can't see things that I have seen before."

Research into macular degeneration in young children is ongoing and the family are hopeful that one day there will be something to help her.

"It's very hard to predict what will happen in the future," says Georgina. "It won't get better naturally and we don't know whether it will stay as it is right now or get worse. When it first happened they said it wouldn't go to the other eye because lightning doesn't strike twice, and since then it's got gradually worse."

Despite being visually impaired, Georgina has attended mainstream schools and has just completed her AS level exams in English literature, theatre studies and history at Hills Road Sixth Form College in Cambridge. "It's been difficult with some of the reading material and it takes me four times as long to read something as my friends," she says.

The additional pressure on her eyes from intensive revision and exams can also cause Georgina's eyesight to drop temporarily. "It can change for a bit," she says. "The afternoon after my last exam I went to Tesco with my dad and I was walking down the middle of the aisles to find him but I just couldn't, and I was really struggling to see anyone.

"It is worrying. I put it down to the fact that I'd been really stressed with my exams. If I haven't had anything really stressful and then something like that happens, it does freak you out a bit and we end up going to the hospital a bit more.

Georgina says her friends are all very supportive and are aware when she is unable to see. "My friends know all about it and it's a really relaxed subject," she smiles. "I know some people who don't want to talk about their evesight but my friends are very good. I don't like being dependent on people but they know when I can't see stuff. There have been occasions when my friends have stopped me getting hit by a car.'

After her A-levels. Georgina hopes to attend drama school but is currently focused on a different goal – representing Great Britain in the London 2012 Paralympics in the team sport goalball.

After hearing about a Paralympics GB talent day through the Cambridgeshire Visual Impairment Service two years ago, Georgina and her dad went to have a look.

"I went instead of going to a family friend's wedding," she explains. "They just weighed and measured me, made me throw a ball against a wall and sprint. It wasn't really anything amazing and I didn't think anything would come of it and wished I'd gone to the wedding instead."

But just a few weeks later, Georgina received a call asking her to attend a trial for the UK goalball squad. "I'd never heard of ' she admits. "I went along and it turned out it was just me with the rest of the squad. I started training and since then I haven't left."

Goalball was developed to be played as a type of rehabilitation programme for injured servicemen after the Second World War. It requires two teams of three players who are all visually impaired and the ball, which looks similar to a medicine ball, weighs around 1.5kg and has a bell inside it so players can work out where it is. Players wear a blindfold and the aim of the game is to get the ball into the opposition's goal.

Georgina was just 14 when she joined the alladult female team and says it was a daunting experience the first time she put on her goggles and was left in darkness.

"It was very scary at first because I'm used to using what little sight I have and I'm very dependent on it.

But now I'm completely used to it and me and my team mates just know where each other are now. There are still times when it is scary, like when you can hear a fast ball but you're not sure where it is.

The girls have varying degrees of visual impairment ranging in severity from B3 (like Georgina) to B1, which is completely blind.

Not only has joining the team benefited Georgina from a fitness point of view, she also believes it has been hugely rewarding to meet people who are in the same situation as herself.

"I didn't know any visually impaired people until I joined the team because I've been in mainstream school all my life and, at first, I didn't feel comfortable. It was a new experience and I wasn't used to people maybe not making eye contact with me even though I know I could do the same to someone else.

"I think some people would be uncomfortable just knowing that I'm visually impaired – not many, because I don't look it. But it's kind of the same, because I've been amongst fully sighted people my whole life I wasn't sure how to act.'

Earlier this year, Georgina received a grant from the Papworth Trust to help fund her team's Paralympics dream and, after picking up gold in the European Championships in Munich in 2009, is feeling confident.

"I am excited but I have moments of panic as well," she laughs. "I can imagine going and letting a goal in - but I can imagine scoring too, which would be amazing.

Students' chance to be football coaches

BUDDING young football coaches have been given the chance to hone their skills on an internationally -renowned course.

As part of a new venture between Samuel Ward Academy in Chalkstone Way, Haverhill, and Haverhill Rovers, a football development centre has been set up for 16- to 19-year-olds, which will allow students to combine academic studies with coaching and regular football matches.

This week, 24 students from Samuel Ward and Eastern Avenue's Castle Manor Business and Enterprise College have taken part in the FA level 1 coaching badge.

The course, which took place at Haverhill Rovers' ground was run in partnership with Ipswich Town community trust and is the first rung on the ladder of becoming a football coach, voluntary or paid.

Kevin Fidell, manager of the Samuel Ward Football Development Centre, said: "This was a fantastic opportunity for the participants to gain a recognised coaching badge, which will not only help them to assist at local schools and clubs but also help them in their academic course and finding future paid work.

"Students on the course will from September be given the opportunity to put these new skills into practice both at their own school and in the local feeder schools."

The Samuel Ward Football Development Centre is open to school leavers with a passion for football.

The first intake of students start in September. For more information, contact Samuel Ward Academy on (01440)

She's back on the dancefloor

Scouting for Girls with Sophie Ellis-Bextor, Audley End House, Saturday, July 16. Tickets from £30.50 fromwww.picnic concerts.com

OPHIE Ellis-Bextor's latest album continues the neat line in sophisticated, grown-up disco she's been crafting for herself since releasing the likes of Murder On The Dancefloor and Take Me Home in 2001.

Make A Scene, her fourth long-player, was released earlier this month, although it was actually finished more than a year ago.

But thanks to a little label wrangling, which resulted in Ellis-Bextor leaving Universal after a decade and setting up her own enterprise EBGBs (which stands for Ellis-Bextor Great Britain), it's only just out.

"It's a big thing to have done, leaving a major label, but exciting, and I'm feeling very good about things," she beams. "What we've managed to do in a year is amazing, and it's all been fairly smooth. Starting my own label is something I've wanted to do for a little while but the timing had to be right."

Early signs point to the 32-year-old's decision being a good one. Make A Scene went in at No 32 – more impressive than it might sound considering Take That released Progress on the same day, which flew to the top of the charts, while the Adele juggernaut shows no sign of slowing down.

"I was a little bit nervous but the album's been doing much better than I expected," she admits. "It feels like a relief and an achievement, and the team I've got around me I think is the best I've had. I'm very proud."

Recorded in fits and starts, Make A Scene sees the singer collaborate with the likes of Freemasons, Calvin Harris, Cathy Dennis, Metronomy, Richard X and Armin Van Buuren.

"I've not really stopped touring and recording for the past few years, so recording was sporadic," she says. "With the collaborations you can't always get everyone in one place."

While Make A Scene deals with its fair share of heartbreak and failed romance, in reality Ellis-Bextor is married with two children to The Feeling bassist Richard Jones and freely admits to being happier than ever.

summer for local Sophie Ellis-Bextor fans: earlier this month, she supported Erasure at their gig in Thetford Forest and, in two weeks' time, she'll be back in the area to join pop trio Scouting for Girls at the second of this summer's Picnic Concerts at Audley

And it's also proving to be a good

"It's lovely being out in the sunshine and surrounded by greenery, when everyone's in a really good mood," she says of these al fresco outings. "This is a very civilised tour – we're doing every Friday and Saturday, so we get a little time off inbetween."

After the tour is finished the singer, who shot to prominence after lending her lyrics and vocals to Italian DJ Spiller's Groovejet, does not want another delayed release, and is already planning to spend the autumn writing and recording her next batch of songs.

Four albums into her career, Sophie counts herself incredibly lucky.

"There is a lot of luck involved, which has only dawned on me in the past three or four years," she admits. "I think when you start out you think you're in control of everything and it's all your choice, but as I've got older I've realised that's not the case, and that's how it should be.

"I'm never going to grumble about anything, and I never want to feel like I'm owed anything. I think you should always be careful what you wish for, too, because you just might get it."

SOPHIE'S CHOICE: Sophie Ellis-Bextor is already planning to spend the autumn writing her next batch of songs.

UR turbulent relationship with technology forms the central theme of Michael Frayn's Alarms & Excursions - a cautionary tale about gadgets.

When four friends sit down for a quiet evening, they find their peace disturbed by a series of bells, buzzers and a troublesome hi-tech corkscrew. A politician is lost for words when the autocue goes off script and an in-flight announcement ends with more than a seatbelt coming undone.

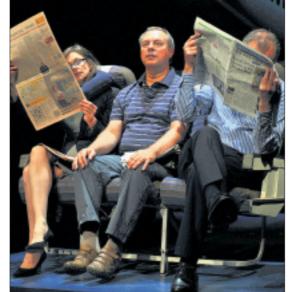

Described as "a clever, light buffet of ideas from a master of observational comedy", Alarms and Excursions - which was first performed in 1998 – takes the form of several miniature plays and looks at what happens when the modern world goes wrong.

"Most of Alarms and Excursions is about our relationship with machines and how treacherous they can be in their dealings with us," Frayn says.

"We have always had this relationship with tools and the progress which they are supposed to bring has always been double-edged. We invented a hammer, a device that was so much better at banging in nails than anything we'd had before, but also something which could give you a painful blow on the thumb. What messes up machines are human intentions. Inventing something invariably leads to unintended consequences: machines mean that things never work out as expected.'

In the first play, Doubles, two couples book adjoining rooms in one of the identikit hotels which are such a feature of modern-day travel.

"I'm pointing out how things today are made affordable by repeating the same pattern over and over again," Frayn explains. "When the hotel rooms are exactly the same as each other, different couples fall into similar patterns of behaviour. People have become extremely difficult to clap your hands if you're already holding a full glass." For Alarms and Excursions, Frayn uses a cast of two men and two women, and he chose a similar four-handed format for Benefactors, his 1983 play. "I like to keep the size of the cast fairly tight – for aesthetic as well as financial reasons," he says. "What's the point of having an actor whose sole function is to announce that 'the carriage awaits' at some point in the performance?"

This latest revival of Alarms and Excursions contains new material written especially for the 2011 tour.

TOM Hanks and Julia Roberts are two of the most successful actors of their generation

Thanks to Forrest Gump, Apollo 13 and the Toy Story trilogy, Hanks is one of the highest-grossing actors at the box office and Roberts was reportedly the first actress to command a fee of $20 million for a role. So they seem an unlikely choice to play characters who have fallen on hard times in this recession-themed romantic comedy directed by Hanks and co-written by Nia Vardalos (My Big Fat Greek Wedding).

In the case of the titular everyman, he overcomes redundancy by dressing 20 years younger, slicking up his hair, swapping his gasguzzling car for a scooter and broadening his education. Essentially, he gets down with the kids. Larry Crowne (Hanks) works

The sweet smell of success

THE myriad colours and delicious scent of the sweet pea have made this popular annual as synonymous with the summer cottage garden as the English rose.

These easy-to-grow climbers are at home in borders, weaving their way up wigwams and obelisks or scrambling through shrubs, or in the vegetable garden grown with green beans, encouraging pollinating insects to the area which will in turn create a better crop.

"The key to every sweet pea is the size of its root. The longer you can allow the roots to grow, the better blooms you will have during the summer," says Lady Ursula Cholmeley, owner and manager of Easton Walled Gardens in Lincolnshire, which raises hundreds of sweet pea plants from seed in the greenhouses. They can be seen in full bloom during Sweet Pea Week, which runs until Sunday.

Gardeners whose sweet peas are looking weak and wishy-washy should boost them with a foliar feed which they can attach to they garden hose or dilute with water in a watering can. A feed such as Growmore is ideal, she says.

"However, if you've prepared the soil well beforehand, adding plenty of organic matter, you shouldn't need to feed them," she notes.

You can sow them twice a year,

by Hannah Stephenson

once in late autumn and again in spring, to ensure a succession of blooms throughout the summer. Autumn-sown plants flower in early summer, spring-sown varieties later on in the summer.

Sow sweet peas in autumn in a cool greenhouse or cold frame in regular potting compost. Once the seedlings start to grow they need to be kept as small as possible, so avoid giving them any warmth.

They can be planted out in spring, from March onwards, in a sunny position, and will withstand light frost but not a more severe hoar frost, so keep a check on weather forecasts and protect them with horticultural fleece if a harsh frost is predicted.

Spring-sown varieties can be sown directly into the ground and should flower later on in the summer.

At Easton Walled Gardens, spread over 12 acres, more than 50 types of sweet pea - heritage, modern, scented, striped, edged and bi-colour are displayed on canes, drums and wigwams throughout the pickery (cut flower garden), vegetable and cottage gardens.

All sweet peas need to be staked and many gardeners use wigwams or other supports to show them to their best. However, the plants can only cling to narrow supports, says Cholmelev.

"Sweet peas cannot climb up bamboo because it's too wide for their tendrils, so you need to put netting around a wigwam. They need full sun to develop their scent.

'There are various theories that if you cut off the tendrils and tie them in, all the energy will be going into flowering and leaf production. Some growers restrict the plants to one stem, which will give them less blooms, but much bigger flowers."

If scent is your main priority, good varieties include Matucana, a deep purple and maroon variety, and Painted Lady, an attractive pink and white bi-colour from the 18th century.

Among Cholmeley's favourites is Promise, which is pink and white. and the deep red Winston Churchill.

Don't plant them with anything which is going to compete for nutrients, she advises. Good plant partners include annuals such as Gilia tricolor, Iceland poppies or salvias, or perennials including alchemilla and catmint.

Avoid placing them next to crocosmias, which carry a virus that will spread to the sweet peas causing yellow mottling on the plants.

Of course, the more you cut sweet peas, the more they will flower. Never let them go to seed or that sends a message to the plant that flowering is over.

Don't try to arrange them neatly in a vase – it's nigh on impossible – just bunch the cut blooms together and let them go their own way. They may only last a couple of days but the scent will permeate your rooms.

Many gardeners report little black beetles (pollen beetles) in the flowers, which puts them off cutting them for indoors.

"If you have this problem, when you pick them put them into a dark place with one light source (they are attracted to light), then they will head towards that light source and you can take the flowers into the house.

The beetles are also attracted to yellow flowers, so consider growing a 'sacrifice plant' such as a hypericum with large, bright yellow flowers, next to the sweet peas.

At Easton Walled Gardens, the sweet peas are rotated as you would vegetables, to avoid a build-up of disease, but Cholmeley says she knows people who have planted their sweet peas in the same place every year with success.

The kids are not all right!

NEARLY two-thirds (63 per cent) of children admit their parents are aggressive drivers and 13 per cent say are scared or embarrassed by mum and dad's driving, according to new research.

The survey by Continental Tyres, asked kids to report what they witnessed and to say how they felt about their parents driving – and the results might make mum and dad think twice about their behaviour.

When 1,000 children between the ages of four and 16 were polled, three-quarters said their parents shout at other road users and one in five reported that their 'responsible adult' used a mobile phone while driving despite this being banned in December 2003.

The back-seat view revealed that 40 per cent of youngsters get upset when mum or dad loses it behind the wheel and one in three gets embarrassed.

The poor driving skills prompt 22 per cent of children to slump down in their seat to try to hide and one in five have told their elders to improve their driving, despite 14 per cent saying they were too scared to tell their parents that they were unimpressed.

Tim Bailey, safety expert for Continental Tyres said: "There are some serious failings highlighted here revealing poor driving practices and lack of courtesy by millions of motorists.

"What compounds that situation is the impact it has on the children. Nearly one in ten said they had gripped the seat in response to the speed of their parents driving.

"The assumption might have been that driving with a child in the car would prompt greater care and attention, but this evidence suggests not, and poor driving habits are potentially being ingrained in future motorists."

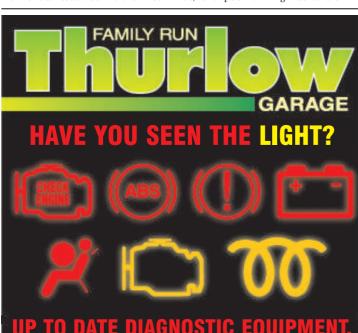

In the study 23 per cent of the children said that they had been in an accident with either mum or dad driving.

According to four in five kids (80 per cent), dad is more likely to speed. However mum is nearly three times more likely to be their 'taxi' ferrying them to school, activities and friends.

It appears that the combustible mix of mum and dad can be worse when both are together. Two-thirds of parents argue about each other's driving with their offspring rating them both as better drivers when their partner was not in the car.

Tim Bailey of Continental said: "Parents are normally very aware of the need to be good role models; this survey reminds them of the need to continue when they get behind the wheel."

Eco-Astra cleans up with 76mpg, 99g/km

VAUXHALL has pulled out all the stops to make its latest Astra ecoFLEX one of the cleanest and most efficient compact cars in the UK, using technology like energy recuperation and adaptive aerodynamics to achieve combined fuel consumption of 76.3mpg and CO2 emissions of just 99g/km.

This last figure means a total exemption from TfL's Congestion Charge, as well as zero VED (Vehicle Excise Duty), inclusion in the lowest 13 per cent BIK (Benefit in Kind) tax band, and 100 per cent capital allowance for businesses.

But thanks to its high-output, 1.7 CDTi diesel engine, strong performance has not been sacrificed. With 130PS of power (5PS up on the current highest output 1.7 CDTi) and 300Nm of torque, the new Astra ecoFLEX leaves other eco-rivals in the shade, maintaining Vauxhall's reputation for combining driveability with exceptional efficiency.

Available to order soon, the Astra ecoFLEX 1.7 CDTi 130PS produces emissions 20g/km less than the Astra 1.7 CDTi 125PS – a massive 17 per cent reduction.

Part of the reason for its low figures is that the Astra ecoFLEX 1.7 CDTi 130PS is fitted with a friction-reduced six-speed gearbox that has been tuned to work with the new version of the engine.

Pricing details to follow soon ecoFLEX: one of the most clean and efficient compact cars.

Leaders hit in Weston thriller race for the Adams Harrison Midweek League, Division One title.

They held on to beat leaders Abington in a thriller, a result which allowed Sawston to take over at the top.

Weston Colville set a challenging 121 for 7, which despite Guy Ennew's 40 and 33 from Dave Pimblett, proved to be one run too many for Abington. Sawston saw off Babraham, Anthony Nirtel proving the difference between the sides after taking 3 for 11 to restrict Cabraham to 92 for 8 and then scoring an unbeaten 31 as Sawston got in with six wickets in hand.

Behind the squabbling pair at the top, Saffron Walden moved into a challenging position by beating Haverhill. Walden scored 138 for 6 (Neil Gladwin 36, Tom Price 32) and James Read took 3 for 11 as Haverhill subsided to 90. Hundon held on to top spot in Division Two by just seeing off Long

In the end a devastating spell from Zakri Khan (4 for 9) halted the visitors at 135, four runs short of Hundon's 139 despite Craig Boon's 41. Earlier James French took 5 for 38.

Cherry Tree's battle to preserve their Division Two status was boosted by a good win at relegation-haunted Helions Bumpstead, who totalled 131 for 2.

Matt Hoadley and David Hodge both

5. Fastest finish of the week came at Brockley, where Hundon II's 114 for 6 was polished off inside 12 overs. A quickfire 33 from Elliott Smith helped them to 116

The Moulton-Day family once again proved key for Gestingthorpe who beat Haverhill with a ball to spare.

Kenny (31), Chris (48) and Billy (3 for 30) were pivotal as Gestingthorpe overhauled Haverhill 112 with 115 for 6. Chris Pilgrim also weighed in with 3

Russell Davis slammed an unbeaten 95 as West Wratting Lions stormed to 181 for 4 against Highpoint, who were never up with the chase and wound up at 78 for 7.

Shelfords are one win from escaping Division 3B.

The promotion-chasers rattled up 167 for 4 (Dan Heath 66, Thomas Barnard 53, and James Hughes 34) and then whipped out Mill Green for 116.

Balsham came up just short in their pursuit of Linton's 100 for 5, which came on the back of Russell Griggs' 45 and against Steve Saunders' four-wicket haul. Mick Housden and Phil Saunders both scored 25 but three wickets for Jamie Boulton stopped Balsham at 96 for 8.

■ Greg Street's unbeaten 35 helped Haverhill II (84 for 3) beat Shelfords (73 for 7) to move into the league cup semi-finals

It's coaching time at Camp Colville

WESTON Colville are staging a three-day cricket camp for youngsters later this month.

Aimed at allowing youngsters to spend concentrated time building their cricket skills, while having fun at the same time, the camp is led by Alex Meddle, the Weston Colville first-team player who has been part of the Sri Lankan Test team's coaching staff during their current tour, and takes place from July 26-28. Open on a first-come, first-served basis to all children aged between 7 and 13, the camp will be supported by a team of qualified coaches and sponsored by the Cambridgeshire Cricket Board.

Steve Potter, the Weston Colville club chairman, said: "We are seeing a really great level of interest in cricket these days, but it is a game with many different aspects, which take a while

"Weekly training sessions are great, but we realise that youngsters can really progress quickly if they spend a concentrated period learning, practising and then building on the skills learned."
Meddle added: "We will be teaching all aspects of the game and are giving an opportunity to children of all abilities and experience to really develop their cricketing skills. "All they need is a packed lunch and suitable outdoor clothing and footwear. Although it is called a camp, there is definitely no overnight stay and we won't be pitching tents on

Horseheath get it right

>> CRICKET: It was a day of firsts as Horseheath registered their long-awaited opening league victory of the CCA Cricket Stick Senior League, Division One season at home to Great

The bottom side passed the 200-run mark for the first time and got a 100-plus opening partnership – something else they had failed to do previously as they finally broke their duck. Martin Giles hit 67 and Mick Ketteridge made 43 as they shared a 116-run stand for the first wicket, before Mark Milne (4 for 67) caused the hosts to slip to 162 for 5.

It was only a mini collapse however, as vice-captain Gary Ellis smashed 93 and Andy Edwards (40 not out) supported him admirably as the pair put on a rapid 123 in just 13 overs. That got Horseheath up to 300 for 6 and Great Shelford were soon in trouble on 49 for 4, Ellis (3 for 29) continuing his good

Paul Mortlock (84) and Kane Munday (28) staged a bit of a recovery, but the home team were not to be denied and Giles (2 for 55) and David Lowe (2 for 19) wrapped things up, the visitors being dismissed for 205.

■ Adam Taylor scored 68 for Weston Colville but it was not enough as his team went down to a seven-wicket defeat to Fordham in Division Two of the Tucker Gardner Cambs and Hunts Premier League.

However, they were dismissed for just 125 with Ian Jellyman (5 for 32) causing problems, and Fordham eased in.

Game on for top-20 finish

» ATHLETICS: Paul Game led the Haverhill Running Club challenge at the Newmarket 10k around Stetchworth on Sunday. He finished 14th in 37min 59sec behind Matthew Harvey, of the organising Newmarket Joggers club, who clocked a course record 33.53.

Yusaf Firat was next best of the Haverhill contingent, crossing the line 55th in 45.22, and he was followed by Sian Barker (72nd) 46.55, Nigel Chapman (87th) 48.39, Trudi Morrish (91st) 48.59, Dave Greenham (123rd) 52.51, Horrice Shuriah (131st) 54.10, Nicola Leek (150th) 56.58, Terry Braverman (175th) 67.17.

SAM Palmer and Lewis Whiting flew the flag for the host club on a record-breaking day in the PGA East Region Pro-Am at Haverhill

The junior members were part of the winning team completed by Kelvin Vince, the Rushmere pro, and Glyn Davies (Newton Green).

They topped the 43-team competition – a medal format, with the best two scores to count on each hole - with a superb 20-under-par

However, pride of place went to Neil Lythgoe, from the Royal Norwich, who broke the course record on his way to victory in the professionals' section. With the new tees on the second and seventh in play this year, he fired a six-under-par gross 64.

And he paid tribute to head greenkeeper Glenn Norris and his team by commenting: "The greens were the best I've played on all year." Haverhill's head professional, Paul Wilby, thanked the club staff, PGA organisers and volunteers for their hard work and thanked the event sponsors, M J Pipe Ltd, Greene King plc, DB Sheetmetals, Saffron Insurance and Stylize Display Graphics.

Singh and you're winning

RAJAN Singh laid the foundations for Haverhill's narrow one-wicket triumph at home to Exning in their Marshall Hatchick Two Counties Championship, Division One clash. Singh set the tone as he bowled Exning opener Liam Bryant for a duck before going on to finish with 5 for 44.

Captain Matt Catley tried to hold the visitors' innings together with 44, but they were dismissed

Haverhill skipper Adam Dellar hit 49 before his side slumped to 111 for 8, with Ian Starling taking 3 for 37 and Mark Geeves 3 for 46.

But that was when Dan Poole rediscovered his form, striking 44 as the hosts got over the line with 168 for 9

However, Haverhill II's have been urged to cut out the cavalier shots and learn to tough things out after losing to Felixstowe at the notoriously-difficult Coronation Park in Division Six.

Sam Hartshorn's 38 bolstered the top order and Steve Fox added a priceless unbeaten 41 as the visitors wobbled at 59 for 5 and 114 for 8, thanks to a combination of loose shots, good fielding and bad luck. Worse for Haverhill was that they folded at 147 off 38 overs, those remaining seven overs then given to Felixstowe and that proved to be pivotal.

The home side played patiently on a good-paced pitch with variable bounce and, although they were 62 for 3 off 30 overs, they still had 22 overs in hand.

Wicketkeeper Phil Dingley held four catches, but 40 extras and an injection of urgency got Felixstowe in with with an over to go.

■ Haverhill's all-conquering Sunday second team plough on in the Hunts County Bats Division Four. They recorded their eighth win out of nine games – the other match was abandoned – with a quickfire double against Battisford.

In pursuit of Haverhill's 210 – Chris Thompson top scoring with 46 before becoming one of Kelk's six victims – the home side initally set off like a train and were 62 for 2 after 10 overs.

Ryan Fowler (0 for 14 off five overs) and Jack Mitchinson (2 for 35) were replaced in the attack by Steve Saville (10-1-19-3) and son David Saville

(8-4-15-2) and they managed to apply the brakes. Adam Curtis (5.5-0-25-2) got in on the act, claiming his victims thanks to a fine catch by Jamie Boulton on the boundary and a quick stumping by the ever-improving James Craig as Battisford wound up 81 runs short in the 35th over.

However, despite 74 from Luke Youngs, Haverhill's Sunday firsts were again beaten by Worlington.

Haverhill's first team are at home to Woolpit on Saturday (1pm) while the seconds are at Elmstead Grasshoppers. Neither Sunday side has a scheduled fixture this weekend.
